This summer, the "ice bucket challenge," benefiting research for ALS, often known as Lou Gehrig's Disease, went viral on social media. All over the country, people dumped buckets of ice on their heads to raise awareness for the disease and simultaneously raised millions of dollars for research.

There are so very many worthy causes out there, so many needs vying for all of our attention, and it's a rare coup to stand out against the crowd as ALS did this year.

At Pacific University, we have no such device. We hope that your own experience and memories of Pacific, coupled with stories of the people here today, will help you forge and strengthen connections with the university — and will inspire you to consider giving back to tomorrow's students.

This issue of Pacific magazine is our annual philanthropy edition. It celebrates the difference that you, as donors and friends, have made to the university.

Financial support is, of course, of paramount importance. As many as 92 percent of today's students — 99 percent of undergraduates — receive financial aid; the gifts you provide make a Pacific University education possible for countless students.

These students are our pride and our joy. They go on to become doctors and artists, business leaders and community activists. They make our world better thanks to the education they receive and, hopefully, they in turn give back to a new generation.

Thank you for your continued support and love of Pacific University!

These historic birches lining the Alpha Zeta Walk had to be replaced this summer. New white oaks now stand in their place.

READERS' WORDS

IN RESPONSE TO "That Community is What Made Me Stronger," a profile of alumna Jennifer Hobbs '87, HOWARD LEVENSON '58, OD '62 writes:

"I share your enthusiasm about your education at PU, and feel the same way about my education and experiences while attending the University. After attending a large major university, I lost my enthusiasm to continue. After transferring to PU my outlook changed ... I feel fortunate to have had the opportunity to attend PU. The education and support were superior, and I have used those learning experiences throughout my life in business, social, political, volunteer endeavors, and raising a family. I visit and stay in touch with many of my PU classmates. What an exciting career you've had. I share your enthusiasm for aerospace, but my private pilots training doesn't allow me to be in your atmosphere. The closest I get is reading the Smithsonian Air and Space magazine."

IN RESPONSE TO "To the Moon and Back," a profile of Sandy Farquahr '65, VINCE HAYES '65 writes:

"You have lived a wonderful exciting life. I am so proud of Pacific U graduates like yourself. Your success makes me feel good about being there at the time I was there. So many have really [progressed] in leadership positions in education, business, government and social justice."

IN RESPONSE TO "Tiny Time Capsule," an online story of a drawing by former student Bryan Dibble, found behind a wall in Clark Hall, RACHEL (FENNIMORE) GLANCY '91 writes

"This is great to see! I had a couple drawings (for 26 years also) Bryan did for me while we were friends at Pacific together. I've always wondered where he ended up living and what he's been doing. Great guy and artist both! Miss you Bryan Dibble!"

JEFF WILMES writes: "I still have mine in the office." (artwork shown)

letter from the president

We at Pacific are dedicated to discovery and excellence in teaching, scholarship and practice. Our students are, and always will be, at our center.

— LESLEY M. HALLICK

LESLEY M. HALLICK, PHD
PRESIDENT Much has changed in the 165 years since Pacific University first secured its charter.

When Tabitha Brown and Harvey Clark established their pioneer school in a little log cabin, they could not have imagined that a facility like the new Cascade Hall would someday stand on the Forest Grove Campus.

I think they could, however, imagine the spirit that would grow from their legacy. I think they would recognize the heart and soul of Pacific University today.

As our mission statement reflects, we at Pacific are dedicated to discovery and excellence in teaching, scholarship and practice. Our students are, and always will be, at our center.

Students like Olin Blackmore '15, this year's Undergraduate Student Senate president. A chemistry major, dance minor and drama club member, Olin's experience is indicative of the broad education and opportunity Pacific University provides students (see page 8).

Even as they prepare for successful careers, our students also broaden their minds and perspectives. They travel, they volunteer, they explore new ideas and experiences, and as alumni they represent the Boxer spirit around the world.

The affection of our alumni, the gifts of our donors, the support of our friends: These are the things that have sustained Pacific University for so long and that will carry us into the future.

This issue of Pacific magazine celebrates the impact that all of our supporters make at Pacific University, from Boxer and Badger level donors (page 21) to members of the 1849 Society, who have given $1 million and more (page 17).

When you support Pacific University — by recommending us to a future student, volunteering at a campus event, or making a financial gift — you create opportunities for students like Olin, and all who will follow him. Thank you so much for your continued support.

Warmest Regards,

Lesley M. Hallick, President

Shady Walk

THE ALPHA ZETA WALK continues to commemorate Pacific University's fallen students with new trees native to Oregon

Some 70 birch trees were removed from Pacific University's Forest Grove Campus this summer, including a historic row that lined the Alpha Zeta Walk. Though the trees are gone, their legacy lives on.

Nearly 70 years old, the birches had outlived their species' expected lifespan, developed root rot, and were in imminent danger of falling, according to the certified arborist who conducted Pacific's annual landscaping assessment.

But their removal was not without some remorse. Forty-one of the trees lined the Alpha Zeta Walk, a pathway between Jefferson and Warner halls, which was dedicated to the memory of Pacific University students who were killed in World War II.

The removal was a hard loss for some alumni who remember, if not the actual dedication of the trees, at least part of the story. Some say that the walkway was planted with one tree for each fallen soldier — though that raises some questions, as 31 students are believed to have died in the war.

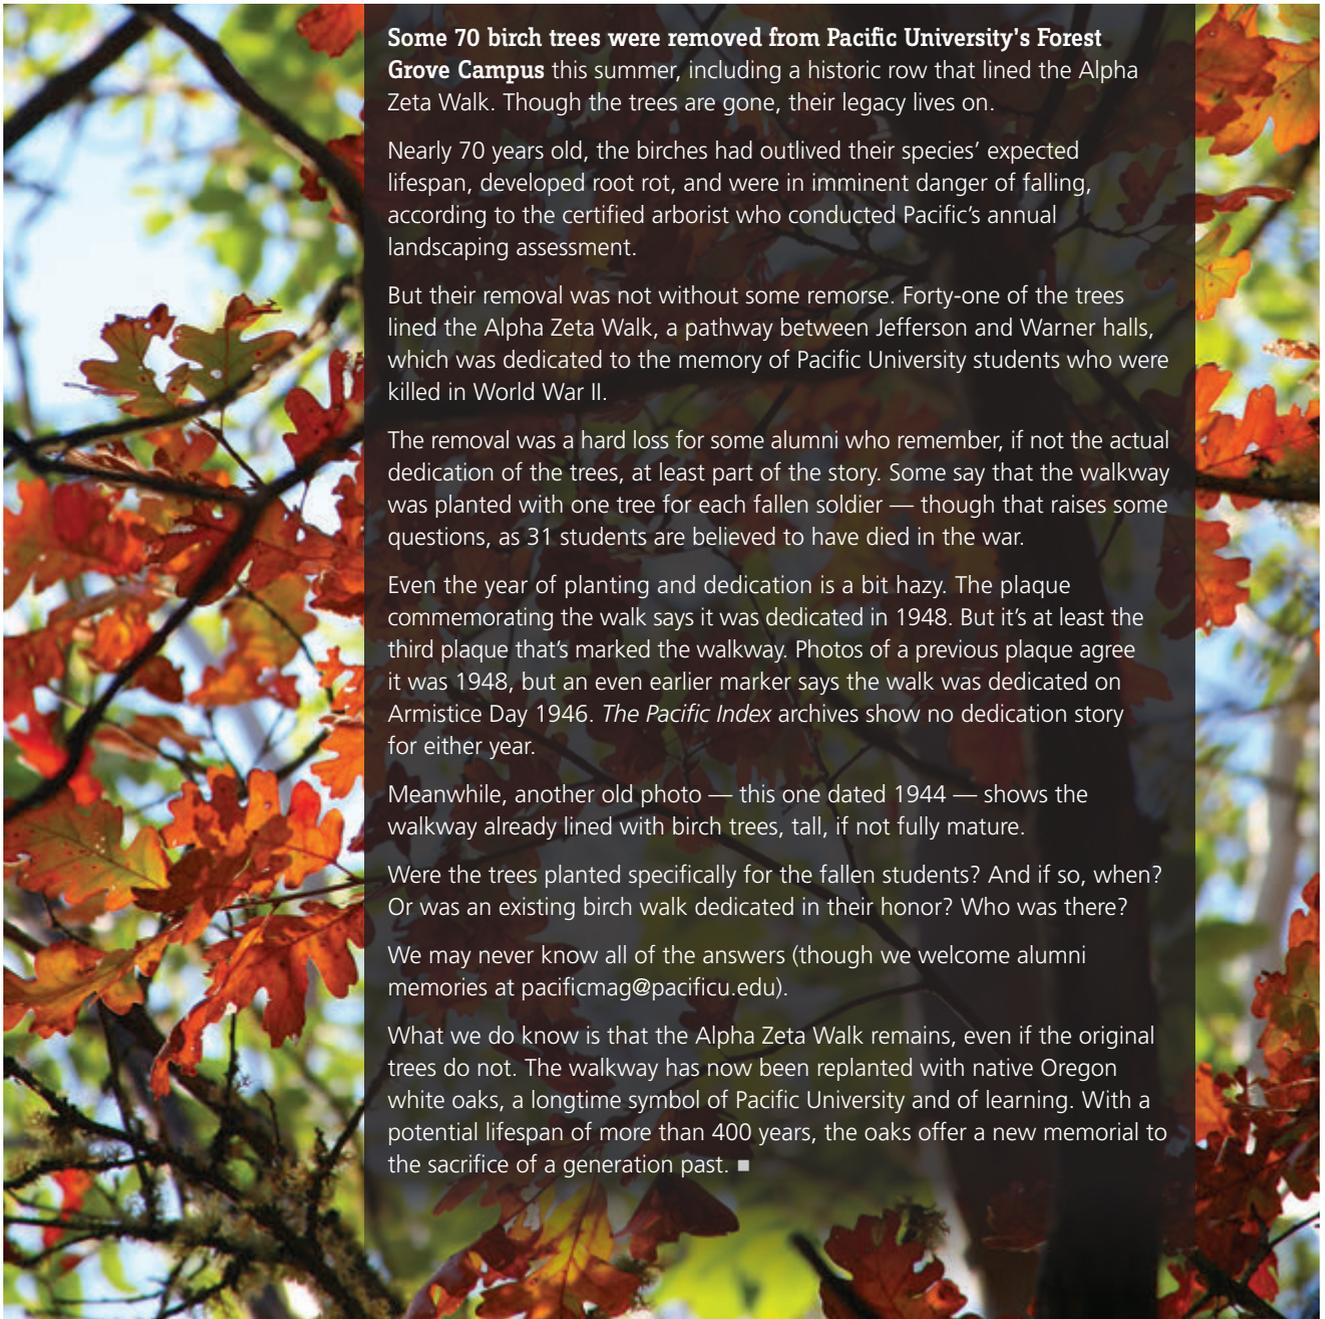

Even the year of planting and dedication is a bit hazy. The plaque commemorating the walk says it was dedicated in 1948. But it's at least the third plaque that's marked the walkway. Photos of a previous plaque agree it was 1948, but an even earlier marker says the walk was dedicated on Armistice Day 1946. The Pacific Index archives show no dedication story for either year.

Were the trees planted specifically for the fallen students? And if so, when? Or was an existing birch walk dedicated in their honor? Who was there?

We may never know all of the answers (though we welcome alumni memories at pacificmag@pacificu.edu).

What we do know is that the Alpha Zeta Walk remains, even if the original trees do not. The walkway has now been replanted with native Oregon white oaks, a longtime symbol of Pacific University and of learning. With a potential lifespan of more than 400 years, the oaks offer a new memorial to the sacrifice of a generation past. ■

FROM SCRIMMAGE LINE TO SIDELINE | As Pacific football entered its fifth season, eight players who helped start the program have joined the staff as assistant coaches: Sean Bangs '14 (defense), Gabe Flory '14 (linebackers), Eric Gietzen '14 (offensive line), Aaron Koford '14 (kickers), Bryan Mills '14 (safeties), P.J. Minaya '14 (quarterbacks), Michael Smith '14 (defensive line) and Brian Taylor '14 (tight ends).

NEW COACHES JOIN STAFF | Pacific welcomed four new coaches over the summer. Eric Mild assumes coaching duties for men's soccer, while Brent Ericksen takes charge of the cross country and track and field teams. Brian Billings succeeded the retiring Greg Bradley as head coach of the baseball program, while Liz Yandall was elevated to head softball coach.

PUTTING A RING ON IT | The short-season class-A Hillsboro Hops baseball team thrilled fans with a Northwest League title in just its second year in Hillsboro. Listeners heard Rich Burk '88 call the play-by-play action for the title run. He was joined on the call by Matt Richert, the current Pacific football and basketball play-by-play voice.

Optometry Professor Emeritus Willard “Wid” Bleything ‘51, OD ‘52, MS ‘54 and his wife, Karen, have created an endowed fund for faculty development initiatives in the College of Optometry. Bleything served as dean, director of international programs, and director of graduate education during his Pacific tenure and received numerous awards, including 2002 International Optometrist of the Year. The Bleything Fund for Faculty Development will provide support to assist faculty in a broad array of scholarly activities, including attendance and presentations at seminars, workshops and scientific meetings, as well as participation in multi-center trials.

Rebecca Rodes, Occupational Therapy, led efforts to establish a scholarship in memory of Robert C.E. Love OT ‘89. Love was a retired Navy and U.S. Coast Guard member who became a practicing occupational therapist and fieldwork educator following his Pacific University education. He died suddenly in 2012. The one-time scholarship was awarded in 2014-2015 to a student in the School of Occupational Therapy. Rodes is an adjunct instructor in the School of Occupational Therapy.

Pacific University has received a National Science Foundation grant of nearly $800,000 for the second phase of its Noyce Scholarship program, which prepares new educators to teach science, technology, engineering and math (STEM) in multicultural, multilingual and high-needs middle and high schools. The program provides scholarship support for exemplary STEM teaching candidates who, in exchange, agree to two years of service in a high-needs school district for each year of scholarship they receive.

Mark A. Della Paolera, Pharmacy, is one of eight pharmacy faculty members nationwide included in the 2014-2015 Faculty Scholars Program by the National Association of Chain Drug Stores Foundation. Faculty scholars identify a research mentor and a small working group at their own schools to foster interactive discussion and peer critique. They also each receive a research grant to launch a patient-focused research project in a community pharmacy setting. The year-long program kicked off with an in-person meeting in August 2014 in Boston.

Olin Blackmore '15 is determined to make the most of his last year at Pacific University.

I'm one of the 99% of undergraduates who receive financial aid.

Olin Blackmore '15 and Professor Rick Whiteley

"I want to be as involved with everything as I can be, because four years just flew by," said the senior chemistry major and dance minor.

Blackmore first discovered Pacific on a bit of a whim. Originally from Anchorage, he visited at the urging of his uncle, who attended physical therapy school at the university.

"I didn't schedule a tour or anything," he said. "But they were so welcoming. It just felt like a very personable school.

"The person who gave me the tour, we still stay in touch, even though she graduated about three years ago."

Later, he attended the Pacesetters Scholarship Competition, where he got another glimpse at Pacific's culture. Most Pacesetters attendees — high school students who visit to compete for a scholarship and learn more about the school — bring their parents, but the expense prevented Blackmore's mother from joining him.

"I felt a little left out, but then some students took me in and sort of acted as my makeshift parents," he said. "That's where I truly fell in love with the school.

"I am very much a family dude, and I'll be honest, coming from such a great distance was hard, but the students made me know I could do it."

Ultimately, though, Blackmore's decision to attend Pacific centered on financial aid.

"I got an academic scholarship, and that's when I realized Pacific was a solid contender," he said. "My parents both work, and they work hard.

I had a job in high school. I wanted an affordable college education."

Blackmore also auditioned for and received scholarships for theatre and dance, and he recently received a M.J. Murdock Trust scholarship — all of which are closely tied to the experiences he's had as a student.

He originally came to Pacific with dreams of becoming a doctor. He took several exercise science and biology classes, but found that he was more interested in chemistry. This year, he will do research with Professor Rick Whiteley, looking at nickel electrodes in space batteries.

"Every day I wake up and think, 'I'm going to do research with someone who worked at NASA!'" Blackmore said.

Whiteley, in turn, calls Blackmore a "star" in his classes.

"Simply put, Olin is a great kid, full of energy, ambition, curiosity, and he is smart, too!" Whiteley said.

A dancer since second grade, Blackmore also has performed in both theatre and dance productions at Pacific.

"I considered not dancing at all, but then I met Jennifer Camp, and she rekindled my love of it," he said. "I definitely thought I wouldn't be dancing as much, but now I'm thinking of perhaps pursuing a career in it."

 CATIE PRECHTEL '14

Camp, the director of dance at Pacific, said Blackmore has become an artist in his time at Pacific.

"He has utilized his time at Pacific to grow into an accomplished performer and a gifted choreographer through his complete dedication and discipline to dance," she said. "Olin is a true inspiration to everyone around him."

Meanwhile, Blackmore serves as president of the Undergraduate Student Senate.

"At this school, you can see the changes you want. You get an immediate benefit," he said, citing recent work to extend sustainability with a covered bike shelter, water stations around campus, and an elliptical machine in the gym that converts exercise into energy.

"I got an academic scholarship, and that's when I realized Pacific was a solid contender."

"I like to think we're making a little impact on the school as students."

Blackmore isn't sure what will come next.

"At this point," he said, "I'm focused on my senior capstone, and I want to leave my mark on the dance and theatre programs."

He spent the summer at a nuclear forensic summer school in Columbia, Mo., which led to his plans to start applying to graduate school soon, and he also did an intensive stint with a dance company in Seattle, which piqued his interest in further performing.

"I would like to keep those two passions intermingling," he said.

"Pacific has offered a lot of fantastic opportunities ... I'm so lucky to be at this school and where I am right now." ■

Edwin '52 and Lois Ball lived their passion for education.

Lifelong teachers, the couple touched thousands of lives, not only in the classroom, but through philanthropic and community service involvement.

Their legacy carries on in a new endowed scholarship that will support students seeking their education at Pacific University.

Born in Salem, Edwin served in the Merchant Marines and then in the U.S. Army during World War II. After the war, he attended Pacific University, where he played basketball and earned a bachelor's degree in physical education.

Lois, originally from Portland, attended Marylhurst College, where she also earned a bachelor's in education.

The couple married in 1951, a year before Ed finished his degree, and together they taught in Cascade Locks, and later Rockaway, Ore., while Ed also coached. They also traveled the world, living for a time in Japan, and teaching together in the Virgin Islands.

Upon their retirement, they moved to Redmond, Ore., wintering in Arizona and California. Ed loved fishing and golfing, and he remained active in the Neah Kah Nie High School graduate scholarship committee, even after his retirement. Lois was known for her generous nature and lifelong support of scholarships, foundations, museums, universities and churches.

The Balls were members of the Pacific University Heart of Oak Society for many years, having made arrangements in their estate plans for a gift to Pacific after their deaths. Ed passed away in 2004, and Lois in 2013.

Only upon their deaths did Pacific discover the magnitude of their gift. Thanks to their careful estate planning, the Balls ultimately donated nearly $150,000, endowing an unrestricted scholarship that will allow Pacific to offer financial support to students with the greatest need — and continuing their lifelong dedication to education into perpetuity. ■

A planned gift to Pacific University allows your legacy to live on in perpetuity.

By including Pacific in your long-term financial planning, you can make a meaningful contribution to the life of the university and its students — often more than you ever imagined thanks to tax savings and asset management.

If you have made a provision, such as a bequest, trust, or life insurance policy, for Pacific, please let us know. We honor such individuals with membership in our Heart of Oak Society.

Busy.

That's how Jim OD '60 and Mary Fair Berglund '58 describe life as they left the Midwest to study at Pacific University.

"We had three young children, we were both taking classes, working hard, and there wasn't much time. But it was great," said Mary Berglund. "We were small-town kids, and so we were very happy in Forest Grove and at Pacific."

The Berglunds are among Pacific's most generous donors. They recently were among the inaugural class of donors inducted into the 1849 Society, Pacific's newest giving society recognizing those whose lifetime contributions have totaled $1 million or more. Berglund Hall, on Pacific's Forest Grove Campus, bears their name, and they also founded the Berglund Center and supported the founding of the College of Business and numerous other endeavors at Pacific.

Following their own time at Pacific, the Berglunds returned to their hometown of Spencer, Iowa. Jim Berglund went into optometry practice with his father-in-law and later moved into the business side of eye care. He quickly became known as an innovative and respected leader in the field.

He was president of Central Laboratories in Lincoln, Neb., an early manufacturer of contact lenses. When American Optical acquired the business, he became general manager of its contact lens division. Next, he was president of Continuous Curve Contact Lens, Inc., which he led to success before it was acquired by Revlon.

Throughout his career, Jim Berglund has had the rare ability to anticipate and embrace change. He recognized early, for example, the potential of the contact lens, when other optometrists held out.

“I didn’t at first think of myself as a business leader or innovator,” he said. “I was a practicing optometrist. But it was something in me, I think, that when others were resisting change or new ideas, I seemed to be able to find practical ways to look forward, see potential and make it work.”

— Mary Fair Berglund ’58

After a short retirement, Jim Berglund founded Enterprise Partners Venture Capital, specializing in start-ups.

Meanwhile, Mary Berglund has found her own success. She earned a degree in economics from Pacific, receiving the Pacific President’s Cup for the graduating student with the highest grade point average. She then earned master’s and doctoral degrees in economics from the University of Nebraska, where she became a faculty member.

When the couple moved to southern California, she served on the faculty at the University of San Diego and the University of California, Irvine. She also has held posts at the Federal Railroad Administration and Department of Agriculture.

Wherever they have gone, the Berglunds have remained committed supporters of Pacific University and of their communities. Jim Berglund has served on 55 boards of directors of various companies and nonprofit organizations, many in the San Diego area where the Berglunds now reside. Mary Berglund also has been an active community leader, serving as director and board member of numerous organizations.

Pacific University Trustee Julie Berglund Baker accepts her parents’ 1849 Society membership from President Lesley Hallick at the 2014 Celebration of Giving.

Jim Berglund served on the Pacific University Board of Trustees from 2001 to 2009 and remains a trustee emeritus. In 2011, he was the inaugural recipient of the College of Optometry’s Kamelia Massih Prize for a Distinguished Optometrist.

Today, their daughter Julie Berglund Baker continues the family tradition as a member of the Pacific University Board of Trustees and chair of its Academic Affairs Committee.

The Berglunds’ commitment to Pacific is a way to give back to an institution that gave them a foundation.

“We were taught to think, to ask why. It wasn’t about just doing things by rote, or doing one procedure and then the next on down the line,” Jim Berglund said. “It was about the why, it was about thoughtfulness. And I think it has to do with the strong connection and foundation of the liberal arts at Pacific. That’s very valuable.”

“The university was good to us,” Mary Berglund said. “We are glad we can help out. It’s nice that when you make a gift to Pacific, you know it can make a big difference.” ■

Pacific University is honored to introduce the 1849 Society, a new level of recognition for our donors who give $1 million or more to the university throughout their lifetimes. Hanson Stadium, home to Boxer football, soccer, lacrosse, and track and field, was transformed this summer with the addition of a canopy over the grandstands

Forest Grove is home for Rich and Joy Hanson.

Though they don't live here anymore, the Hansons remain connected to the small town where they grew up.

Earlier this year, that connection became even more formal, as Pacific University dedicated its sports stadium to the long-time donors and friends.

Hanson Stadium was transformed this summer with the addition of a canopy over the grandstands. The stadium is home to Boxer football, soccer, lacrosse, and track and field, as well as commencement and community events.

Featuring a cantilevered design — meaning no view-obstructing support beams between fans and the field — the stadium now offers protection from both sun and rain for the thousands of people who attend events there each year.

The roof has been a passion for Rich Hanson.

“Rich was really the instigator for getting this roof built, and in record time,” said Mindy Cameron ‘65, chair of the Pacific University Board of Trustees.

Rich and Joy (Engelen) Hanson were both raised in Forest Grove.

After graduating from the University of Oregon, Rich Hanson joined a management training program at U.S. Gypsum. He spent 39 years with the Weyerhaeuser Co., retiring in 2008 as executive vice president and chief operating officer.

In September 2005, he joined the Pacific University Board of Trustees. In 2011, the couple received the university’s Harvey Clark Award.

“Rich and Joy have given so much,” said Pacific University President Lesley Hallick. “It is an honor to name this stadium after the Hanson family.”

Today, the couple lives in Longbranch, Wash., but they remain dedicated supporters of Pacific University.

They have helped fund the relaunch of football, the establishment of the College of Business — and most recently, they were lead donors on the stadium roof project.

The roof, Rich Hanson said, is close to the heart because the stadium is part of Lincoln Park Athletic Complex, a joint venture between Pacific and the City of Forest Grove — and so it’s a way to support both.

“Rich was really the instigator for getting this roof built, and in record time.”

It’s all part of what he sees as an investment in the growth of the university.

“I joined the board almost 10 years ago,” he said. “In that time, we’ve added 1,000 students — that’s a 42 percent increase.

“I guarantee you, Pacific is on a roll and going to continue to grow and prosper.” ■

Several membership levels are available, from a recent alumni membership of $35 per year for alumni who have graduated in the last five years, to the $3,000 Hall of Fame level membership. Each membership level comes with its own set of benefits, ranging from tickets to merchandise and more. Members also can decline these benefits to make their gifts 100 percent tax deductible. Boxer Club membership fees support a wide variety of programs, projects and special needs, including equipment and uniforms, travel, salaries for assistant coaches, and recruiting costs.

One Generation to the Next

BY JENNI LUCKETT

Jim Sumner '66 was the first in his family to attend college.

“My parents were enjoying the post-war prosperity. They said, ‘We’d love you to go to college.’”

At Pacific, Sumner found a wider world than he’d imagined.

“I had gone to what was, at the time, Oregon’s largest high school. It was enormous, over 3,000 students, and in that entire student body were one African-American student, whose parents were very well educated, one Japanese-American family who ran the grocery store, and two Latinos,” he said.

“I got to Pacific and realized right away there were a whole lot of interesting people here I didn’t know anything about.”

He remembers Pacific University in the late 1960s as a bastion of diversity, thanks in part to aggressive student recruitment in Hawai‘i, in California, and in traditionally low-income and racially diverse high schools, combined with the relative affordability of a college education.

“If you worked part time during the school year and full time in the summer, which everybody did, and your parents were able to give you a little bit of help, you could easily meet the cost of any school in the country and graduate without debt,” Sumner said. “That’s not the case anymore.”

Sumner is among a group of Pacific alumni from the late ‘60s who would like to make it a little easier for students — particularly those who, like him, are first-generation college students — to gain an education.

The classes have banded together to raise $25,000 to endow a scholarship, which they are calling the Golden Guard Scholarship, in recognition of their upcoming 50-year reunions, at which alumni are inducted into the Golden Guard.

The scholarship would target students who are the first in their families to attend college.

The idea was to pool the efforts of classes across several years to get to the point of an endowed scholarship, said Bruce Bishop ‘68.

Bishop said that a scholarship created from their fundraising would target students with financial need in their third and fourth years at Pacific, so they don’t “just come in for their freshman or sophomore year and then not be able to graduate for financial reasons,” he said. The scholarship also would, ideally, focus on students who are the first in their families to attend college.

Bishop said he believes that the scholarship might help attract a more diverse population of students — one that more closely mirrors his and Sumner’s Pacific experiences.

“It’s much more expensive now, obviously, for students than it was in my day,” he said. “So hopefully the Golden Guard Scholarship will be a way that our classes can help support students in following in our footsteps.” ■

SUSAN POOL AND LINDA IKEDA, granddaughters of 1923 alumni Leslie and Ellen (Anderson) Hoar, donated their grandfather's Pacific University athletic blanket and coaching horn to Pacific University. Leslie Hoar was a standout athlete and coach at Pacific, while Ellen Anderson was an early member of the Women's Athletic Association, as well as a debater and singer. The Hoars went on to serve as educators in the Tacoma area, where they raised two children — and became beloved grandparents to Susan and Linda. ▶ pacificu.edu/blanket

LOREN AND DOTTIE WALTZ POSE WITH THEIR DAUGHTER AMY WALTZ at the 2013 Pacific University Celebration of Giving. The Waltzes recently gave $50,000 to establish the Waltz Endowment for the Center of Peace and Spirituality at Pacific. The endowment will help the center host prominent speakers, such as last spring's visit by social activist Angela Davis. ▶ pacificu.edu/cpas

OREGON TERRITORY MISSIONARIES Elkana and Mary Richardson Walker are among the earliest white settlers in the region. Their son, Cyrus, grew up at Tshimakain, learning the native Spokane language, and later worked at Warm Springs Indian Agency. Walker descendent Betty Thorn recently donated a collection of Cyrus Walker's papers, including journals and letters, to Pacific University, marking one of the most significant additions ever to the university collections.

WHEN MADISON CLIFFORD '17 WANTS A CHANGE of scene, she grabs her computer and heads to her floor lounge.

On a clear day, she can see Mt. Hood from the fourth-floor common space in Pacific University's new Cascade Hall.

"It's a really pretty view," said the sophomore. "Lots of people hang out there."

Pacific's newest living community opened this fall to nearly 200 students, most freshmen and sophomores. The hall is designed to help draw underclassmen into the community. The rooms, though comfortable, are basic, while common areas — like the floor lounges, shared kitchens and spacious first-floor recreation area — are luring.

The hall also is designed to fit the university's aesthetic and philosophical values. Its wood and brick exterior borrow from the historic feel of Marsh and McCormick halls, while its up-to-the-minute environmental design match Pacific's commitment to sustainability.

Nuts & Bolts

In Cascade, students control thermostats in their own rooms, but sensors turn off the heat if a window is open.

Art Professor Jim Flory created the four-floor mural that “cascades” down the grand staircase.

In the UC students eat in The Grove, pick up snacks in the P.O.D. Market and grab coffee at the full-service Starbucks.

Cascade Hall is part of a larger transformation project that launched this summer throughout the university. The new roof over the grandstands at Hanson Stadium (page 14), as well as remodeled classroom and lab space at the Hillsboro Campus are part of the transformation, as is the refresh of the Washburn University Center.

After a summer of remodeling, the UC reopened to students in September with a whole new look. A large, round skylight brings in natural light, while contemporary furniture, selected by a student committee, offers comfortable eating, studying and lounging options. The stairways have been opened up and the bathrooms remodeled. The bookstore has moved in from off campus. And, updates to the dining options — from all-access meal plans to the new full-service Starbucks — make it an enticing place to eat.

For Clifford, the updates throughout campus are part of an even better college experience.

“My siblings went here six and eight years ago,” she said. While she’ll share their academic success, her on-campus life will be something different.

Oregon Gov. Victor G. Atiyeh Hon. '96

A longtime friend of Pacific University, Gov. Victor G. Atiyeh died July 20, 2014, at the age of 91. Atiyeh held an honorary degree from Pacific University and was a member of the Board of Trustees. He recently donated his personal collection of papers, memorabilia and other artifacts to Pacific University for preservation and public viewing, and the collection opened with a special exhibit in October 2013.

"Pacific University lost a great friend yesterday with the passing of Gov. Vic Atiyeh," President Lesley Hallick said upon the governor's death. "As a legislator, governor, and later, as a member of our Board of Trustees, Gov. Atiyeh took a keen interest in higher education and Pacific University, in particular. We are very grateful for his contributions and honored to help preserve his legacy as custodians of his personal collection."

Atiyeh was born Feb. 20, 1923, to Syrian immigrants and would later become the nation's first Arab-American governor. He played football for the University of Oregon and turned down an offer to play for the Green Bay Packers. He joined the military during World War II but was kept out of active service due to childhood injuries.

He married his high school sweetheart, Dolores Hewitt, on July 5, 1944, and took over the family carpet business that year.

In 1958, Atiyeh was recruited to run for the Oregon House of Representatives. He served three terms in the House and four terms in the Senate, including a stint as Senate minority leader. He lost a bid for governor in 1974, but was elected in 1978. He served through eight years of economic upheaval and was known for his work to diversify Oregon's economy, leading a variety of trade missions overseas.

In 1979, he received the Pacific University Service Award, and he sat on the Board of Trustees from 1987 to 1995. In 1996, he was awarded an honorary doctor of letters degree from Pacific. Atiyeh selected Pacific to write and publish his official biography, which will be authored by faculty member Jim Moore, director of the Tom McCall Center for Policy Innovation. Publication is planned for 2016.

Atiyeh is survived by his wife Dolores, daughter Suzanne, son Tom, and five grandchildren.

At the governor's request, the Pacific University Chamber Singers performed 12 selections at his public memorial service at the Oregon Capitol.

Gifts in his memory may be made to the Governor Atiyeh Endowment, the Atiyeh Scholarship Endowment, the Governor Victor Atiyeh Collection or the Atiyeh Biography Project at Pacific University.

Introducing the 1849 Society

Pacific University is proud to introduce a new level of recognition for our donors who give $1 million to the university throughout their lifetimes.

Be it one dollar or a million, every gift makes a difference.

Thank You
